CUTII HELPS SENIOR STAY SAFE & ACTIVE INSIDE THE HOME

French Robotic Company's Home Companion Provides Home Care Assistance, New Experiences to Elderly

Roubaix, France, December 18, 2017 – By 2050, the number of elderly people in the United States is estimated to be around 80 million – 1 in 5 of the population. Families of homebound or physically-impaired seniors struggle to feel safe leaving their loved ones at home alone, as it could lead to detrimental social isolation or depression. Luckily, Cutii, a voice-controlled home companion, can make communication and engagement more possible for everyone, all from the comfort and safety of home.

Designed to be a home care assistant, Cutii monitors the safety of its owner. The robot integrates facial and vocal recognition software to detect falls and distress calls in the home, alerting authorities in case of an emergency. Routine checks to the doctor can be simple with Cutii's precision camera and touchscreen that make interacting with care providers outside the home easy.

“Monitoring and ensuring the safety of our users is Cutii’s top priority,” said Antoine Bataille, Cutii’s CEO. “Cutii preserves the physical and emotional value of keeping in contact with family and peers, creating a foundation for a healthier, happier lifestyle.”

This award-winning robot also keeps users engaged with activities both inside and outside the home. Seniors can take part in activities like cooking classes, yoga and virtual trips around the world or stay in touch with family and friends during all of life’s special moments. Cutii also connects with smart technology around the home, integrating calendar reminders and video calls so users never miss a beat.

Cutii will showcase its product at CES Las Vegas from the Eureka Park Marketplace in Hall G, Booth #50415 on January 9-12, 2018 at the Sands Expo Center.
